

Jonathan Lewis

Jonathan Lewis, Associate Vice Chancellor in the Office of Health Affairs, focuses on collaborations among the UT health institutions, the new medical schools, and affiliated partners to define, measure, and improve health care value in terms of health outcomes and care costs. In this role, Jonathan helps institutions in their pursuit to implement innovative value-based delivery and payment models, integrated health systems, new coverage models, risk tolerance, health data analytics, and population health management. He also supports UT collaborative efforts in the health research arena including clinical trials administration, biobanking, and core research laboratory facilities.

Prior to this role, Jonathan served as the Financial and Contract Manager at UT System for the Texas Child Mental Health Care Consortium. Before coming to the UT System, he was a Senior Policy Analyst at Every Texan, where he worked on policies to improve economic and health opportunity in Texas. Jonathan's previous work also includes budgeting and policy analysis for both the Texas Legislative Budget Board and the New York City Office of Management and Budget. He received his Master of Public Administration from New York University and a Bachelor of Economics from Baylor University.
